CHALLENGE YOURSELF

by Colm Flynn

Would you like a new challenge? Young people all over Britain and Ireland, and in many other countries, would. They've worked for bronze, silver or gold medals for helping others, learning new skills and challenging themselves.

Every year, thousands of 14 to 25-year-olds take part in The Duke of Edinburgh's Award (DoE) in Britain and Gaisce – The President's Award, in Ireland. ('Gaisce' [gæskə] is the Irish word for 'courage').

Both award programmes have similar rules. You must first have an adult who is trained by the award organization to help you. The awards have four parts: a physical skill, a personal skill, community service and an adventure. You get the award through hard work and determination.

The Duke of Edinburgh's Award

This award was started in 1956 by the Queen's husband - Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh. It's for girls and boys between 14 and 25. More than three million people have completed the award.

Firefighting, fitness, fun

Michelle Burns, 15, from Buckinghamshire in England, did the silver Duke of Edinburgh's Award. Michelle got the perfect idea for her community service - she joined the fire brigade! "It was the most exciting time of my life! You should have seen me! On my last day, an emergency call came in – a car was on fire. I was allowed to use the hose. It was wonderful to help the community."

Michelle joined an athletics club for her physical skill. "The club went running early every Sunday morning. I was not really happy about how early it was but I enjoyed it." For her personal skill, Michelle needed some ideas from the DoE website. "There's a huge list of things you can do – something for everyone!" She decided to try public speaking.

Gaisce – The President's Award

Gaisce was started in Ireland in 1985. The President of Ireland, Mary McAleese, thinks Gaisce is really important.

For her expedition, Michelle spent a weekend cycling in Lincolnshire. "It was great cycling around the hills and countryside. Lincolnshire is a beautiful area." Now that Michelle has her silver medal, she says she's proud of all her hard work. "I feel much more confident, fitter and healthier from athletics, and proud about my work with the fire brigade. I love telling people about it! Doing the award has made me feel prouder, more confident and better about myself."

Going for gold

The highest level is the gold medal. It takes up to three years. Alan Foley, 19, from County Kerry in Ireland, got his gold Gaisce medal after a lot of hard work. One day a week, Alan worked at a special needs school. "It was a wonderful place to work. Young people are all the same. The ones I worked with had some special needs and disabilities. I did art with the kids, or helped them with reading and writing. Sometimes I had to be patient but it was worth it."

For his personal skill, Alan decided to learn how to drive. And for 18 weeks, Alan played tennis – a sport he'd never tried before. "These awards make you try new things – whether it's meeting new people, doing new sports, learning new skills, visiting beautiful places you've never seen before or just having a great adventure."

For four days, Alan kayaked down the White Nile River, in Uganda, in eastern Africa. "I looked for the biggest adventure I could find. Working towards the medal really was the hardest thing I had ever done – but also the most rewarding!"

Four challenges

The DoE and Gaisce awards both have four parts. Although the names are a little different, both awards

Duke of C Edinburgh		Gaisce	What you can do – just a few examples
⊢	5kill	Personal Skill	Learn a musical instrument, a new language, how to build a canoe or how to cook!
	Service	Community Involvement	Work with the young, old or sick, or at organizations that help people. Do conservation work. Join the Red Cross.
	Physical Recreation	Physical Recreation	Football, rugby, tennis, martial arts, gymnastics, polo, mountain biking, yoga.
	Expedition	Adventure	A camping, bicycle or canoe trip from two (bronze) to four (gold) days.

From prison to Potter

After Robert Dunnington, from West Yorkshire, in England, got out of youth prison, he didn't know what to do. Robert, 15, decided to try to get a bronze Duke of Edinburgh's medal. "The award has helped me to make friends and taught me how to help others," Robert told us.

For his personal skill, Robert chose reading. "I didn't go to school much," he says. "Sometimes I was ashamed of that. So I set a goal for myself to read all the Harry Potter books. I found it difficult sometimes. But the more I read, the easier it became. And I realized I was enjoying the books. I couldn't stop!" Reading has changed Robert. "I've got a lot more self confidence," he says. "I once thought I would never read a book. But within a year, I'd read the whole Harry Potter series!"

For other parts of the award, Robert started swimming and learnt first aid. And for his adventure, Robert went hill walking in Scotland with other DoE participants. "It was November, so it was wet, windy and cold," he says. "But that didn't stop us from having fun. One day, we walked along a road. We didn't know where we were going and it was raining. When I look back now, I think we were crazy! But the rain stopped and we came to a beautiful castle next to a river. It looked fantastic."

"After doing this award, you feel like you've done something 13 wonderful. I feel happy with myself because I went on this big adventure. I made friends who didn't care that I'd been to prison. They liked me for who I am now. It was a great experience!"
