Student A

Christopher Columbus (or Cristoforo Colombo in Italian) was born in 1451 in Genoa, in present-day Italy. As a young boy he spent many days listening to sailors' tales of their voyages. As soon as he could he became a sailor and studied mapmaking and navigation. By the age of 25 he was living in Portugal. At the time explorers were trying to find a sea route to Asia. Some explorers were trying to sail around Africa, but Columbus realised that by sailing west you should reach Asia. Finally, in 1492, King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, the rulers of Castile and Aragon (in Spain) agreed to give Columbus the money he needed to buy ships and supplies.

Student B

Columbus set sail on August 3rd, 1492. After a short stop in the Canary Islands he sailed west with his three ships – the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria. The voyage was difficult, but on October 12th, after 17 days at sea, they saw land. Columbus thought he had sailed around the world to Asia, but of course he hadn't. Columbus spent ten weeks exploring before sailing back to Spain where he promised King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella gold and jewels. In the next 11 years he made three more voyages, but never discovered gold. Finally, he was sent back to Spain where he died in 1506 at the age of 55.
