

Audioblogs

Let's discuss

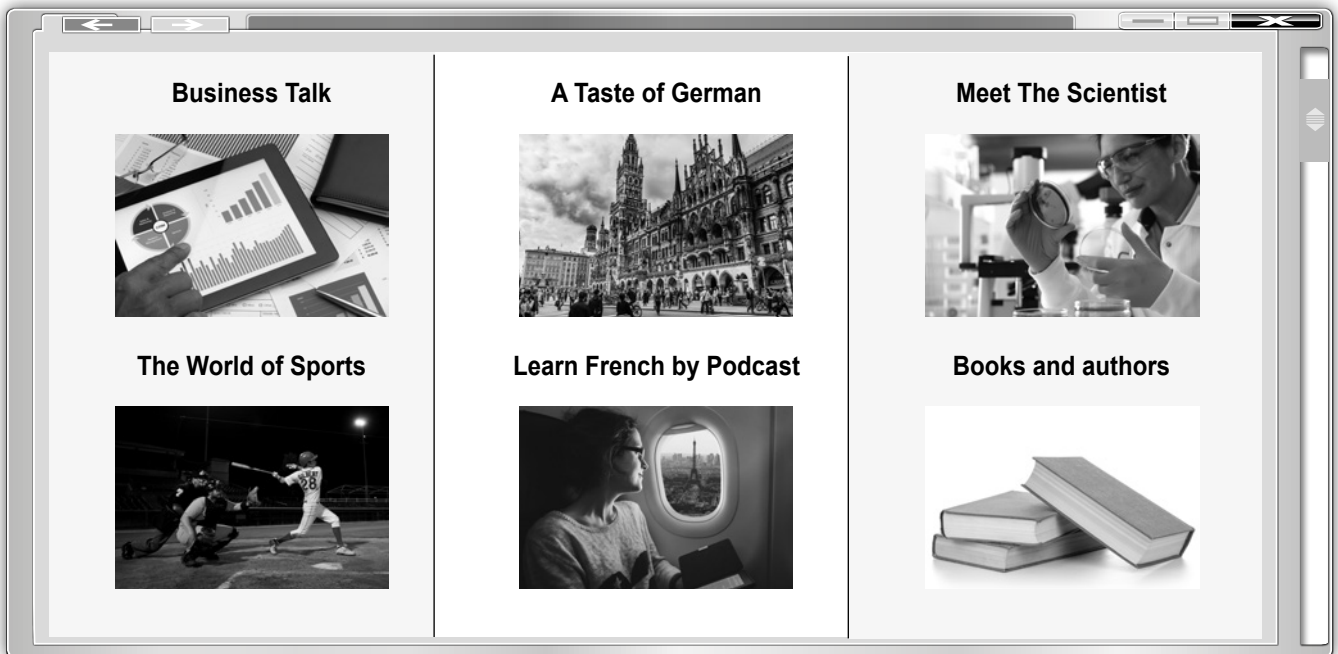

1 Read the text and answer the questions.

An audioblog is similar to a written blog, except that you listen to it! Audioblogs are fun because they are usually short and you can listen to them as many times as you want. A podcast is a type of audioblog. You can listen to audioblogs by famous people, or you can find topics which you are interested in, such as sports or music. You can make your own audioblog, add a title, photos, and share it with your friends!

1. Have you ever listened to an audioblog?
2. Do you think audioblogs are interesting? Why or why not?

Let's analyse

2 Look at the example of an audioblog website. Answer the questions in groups.

1. What languages can you learn in these audioblogs?
2. What other topics can you hear about?
3. Which of these audioblogs would you like to listen to? Why is it interesting to you?

Let's do it!

- Step 1 Choose your favourite wild animal to describe in an audioblog (for your classmates to guess).
- Step 2 Write a short script comparing it to other animals using the comparative adjectives you know. Remember: don't say its name!
- Step 3 Go online and search for websites where you can upload your audioblog for your classmates to listen.
- Step 4 Record your audioblog using the microphone on your computer or your mobile phone. Speak clearly and practise before you record.
- Step 5 Publish your audioblog and share the link with your classmates and teacher. Can they guess which wild animal you are describing? You can have a picture ready to show them after they guess.
