As the 20th book in his Diary of a Wimpy Kid series is published, the author shows no signs of slowing down – scripting films, opening a bookshop and making plans to rebuild his hometown

Stuart Heritage

01 February, 2026

- 1 Watching Jeff Kinney sign books is like watching a piece of performance art. Kinney wheels round the table on a chair, signing as he goes. He is totally focused.
- 2 Today Kinney is signing copies of Partypooper, the 20th book in his blockbuster Diary of a Wimpy Kid series. Every copy has the phrase "Over 300 million books sold" on it. To children of reading age at any point over the last twenty years, Kinney is a rock star.
- 3 Before he first created Wimpy Kid – about the adventures of a student called Greg Heffley – Kinney was a software engineer. When the first book was released it became a sensation.
- 4 Now 54 years old, Kinney is both very tall and very polite. And, for someone who has to be extremely rich, quite normal. He could quite easily be a friendly teacher, or someone who runs a small business.
- 5 Every new Wimpy Kid book is an event. For some authors, this may cause stress, but Kinney doesn't seem to mind. "I've got a whole world that I feel responsible for. People have careers that come out of [the Wimpy Kid books], but I wouldn't call it pressure. It's a nice place to be."
- 6 Kinney also owns the Wimpy Kid franchise. As well as the books he also writes the screenplays for all of Disney's Wimpy Kid movies. He says this is what keeps the books feeling fresh. "My first few books are just like a collection of jokes," he smiles. "I didn't care that much about telling a good story. It wasn't until book 12 that I started to get the hang of it."
- 7 If that wasn't enough, Kinney also works as a town planner. When his books started to take off, he used some of the money to open a bookshop in his hometown. And when the store became a success he decided to branch out to the whole region.
- 8 "The downtown is very depressed," he says. "The industry is gone, and now you're left with this town where everybody lives, but they don't have anything to do. So what we're doing is we're building. We just finished a beer garden, and now we're gonna put in a pizza restaurant, and then we're going to create a town green and some other things too."
- 9 When a series has enjoyed success for as long as Wimpy Kid's, some authors can begin to feel restless. To avoid this, Kinney has written a spin-off series about Heffley's best friend, and a collection of short stories. I ask him if he has a number of books he'd like to write before he moves on.
- 10 "There were two goals I wanted to reach. One was book 20, and the other was 300 million books in print. I didn't ever think beyond that. And now I've gotta say, what's next?"
- 11 For a moment, I worry that he's about to announce his retirement. But no. "When you look at what I've created, it's a cartoon character," he goes on. "Cartoon characters tend to go on for a long time. You know, Charles Schulz did Peanuts for 50 years."
- 12 "It's such a privilege because, you know, it's hard to break in as a writer," he says. "I'm very aware of how lucky I am to not have to introduce myself to the public when I have a new book, and I like that better."

6 In your own words

- a. Imagine that you had the resources, like Kinney, to make a difference in your community. Work in small groups to develop a plan for how to do this. Follow the steps.

Step 1: Identify the problem

- Discuss what your local area lacks or what problems it faces (e.g., no green spaces, boring downtown, lack of entertainment for young people, poor transport links, etc.).
- Choose ONE main issue to focus on.

Step 2: Brainstorm solutions

- Come up with at least three different ideas for addressing this problem.
- Think about the answers to these questions: What would attract people? What would create jobs? What would bring the community together?

Step 3: Develop your plan

- Choose your best two or three ideas.
- For each idea, discuss:
  1. What exactly would you build/create/organise?
  2. Where would it be located?
  3. Who would it benefit?
  4. What challenges might you face?

- b. Present your plans to the class. Be prepared to answer questions from other groups.
